Over 99% of donations are restricted in use by the donor.

What does that mean?

Interest earned from the initial donation can only be used for the purpose that the donor specified. For example, a donation made to benefit a particular department cannot be used by any other department, even if a higher priority exists, due to the legal restrictions placed by the original donor. This restriction lasts forever.

Interest earned and distributed from the endowment helps make the University great. These funds supplement the budget and allow departments and programs to accelerate initiatives that make them nation and world leading.

---

The University’s endowment today provides approximately $160 million a year, spread across the entire University